November Nuggets - November 19

The following email was sent to the KYAE list-serv.

GED Testing Service® provides educator access to student scores

GED Testing Service® has provided an avenue for educators to access their students' scores. All program directors have been given access to an educator version of GED Manager®. However, in order for student information to appear in this system, your students must grant permission for you to access their score information.

Students can grant this permission at MyGED® by editing their profile or by accessing it from the "My Scores" page. Students are asked to select their adult learning center (all Kentucky adult education programs appear in this list) and then agree to share their score information to get help from a teacher who can check their score report, give study advice and help them pass the test. Students are also told they may be able to get study materials discounts, classes and the test through an adult education center.

Please make sure your new and existing students know about this opportunity to share scores.

Once your students grant permission, you will be able to see their GED Ready™ scores and their GED® test scores. By clicking on the individual student test, you will go directly to the student score report page and the targeted instruction recommendations for that student.

If you are a program director and did not receive your log-in information, please contact Rae.Smith@ky.gov for directions.
